THE S&P 500® INDEX

We have derived all information contained in this product supplement regarding the S&P 500® Index, including, without limitation, its make-up, method of calculation and changes in its components, from publicly available information. Such information reflects the policies of, and is subject to change by, Standard & Poor's, a division of The McGraw-Hill Companies, Inc. (S&P). We make no representation or warranty as to the accuracy or completeness of such information. The S&P 500® Index was developed by S&P and is calculated, maintained and published by S&P. S&P has no obligation to continue to publish, and may discontinue the publication of, the S&P 500® Index.

The S&P 500® Index is reported by Bloomberg L.P. under the ticker symbol SPX.

Criteria for Inclusion in the S&P 500® Index

The S&P 500® Index is intended to be a measure of the U.S. equities markets. The S&P 500® Index includes 500 U.S. companies. The S&P 500® Index is maintained by the S&P Index Committee, a group of Standard & Poor's economists and analysts. Criteria for inclusion in the S&P 500® Index include the following:

U.S. Company. Determining factors include the location of the company's assets & revenues, its corporate structure, its SEC filing type, and its exchange listings.

Market Capitalization. Companies with market cap in excess of US$3.5 billion.

Public Float. There must be public float of at least 50%.

Financial Viability. Companies should have four consecutive quarters of positive as-reported earnings, where as-reported earnings are defined as net income determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles excluding discontinued operations and extraordinary items.

Adequate Liquidity and Reasonable Price. The ratio of annual dollar value traded to float adjusted market capitalization for the company should be 1.0 or greater, and the company should trade a minimum of 250,000 shares in each of the six months leading up to the evaluation date.

Sector Representation. Companies' industry classifications contribute to the maintenance of a sector balance that is in line with the sector composition of the universe of eligible companies with market cap in excess of US$3.5 billion.

Company Type. All U.S. common equities listed on the NYSE (including NYSE Arca and NYSE Amex) and the NASDAQ stock market are eligible for inclusion. REITs (excluding mortgage REITs) and business development companies (BDCs) are also eligible for inclusion. Closed end funds, ETFs, ADRs, ADSs and certain other types of securities are ineligible for inclusion.

Continued membership in the S&P 500® Index is not necessarily subject to the above guidelines, but a company may be removed from the S&P 500® Index due to a substantial violation of one of the above criteria or if the company no longer meets the criteria for inclusion due to a merger, acquisition or significant corporate restructuring.

Calculation of the S&P 500® Index

The index value is the quotient of the total float-adjusted market capitalization of the index's constituents and its divisor. The index is calculated based on a base-weighted aggregative method. This means that the value of the index reflects the market capitalization of the companies included in the index relative to a specified base period and base value. The calculation of the index uses base period quantities (share counts) to calculate the price change in the index. The base period for the S&P 500® Index is the years 1941-1943 and the base value for the S&P 500® Index is 10. Continuity in index values is maintained by adjusting the divisor for changes in the constituents' share capital after the base period. This includes additions and deletions to the index, rights issues, share buybacks and issuances, and spin-offs. The divisor's time series is, in effect, a chronological summary of all changes affecting the base capital of the index. The divisor is adjusted such that the index value at an instant just prior to a change in base capital equals the index value at an instant immediately following that change.

The market capitalization of an index constituent is the product of the share price for that company multiplied by the number of shares outstanding. The market capitalization values used to calculate the index are float adjusted. This means that the outstanding shares used in the calculation of market capitalization are adjusted to remove the holdings of certain groups of shareholders that are presumed to hold shares for control of the relevant index constituent rather than for investment. These three groups of holdings are:

Holdings by other publicly traded corporations, venture capital firms, private equity firms or strategic partners or leveraged buy-out groups.

Holdings by government entities, including all levels of government in the United States or foreign countries.

Holdings by current or former officers and directors of the company, founders of the company, or family trusts of officers, directors or founders as well as holdings of trusts, foundations, pension funds, employee stock ownership plans or other investment vehicles associated with and controlled by the company.

If the shares held in one of these three groups exceed 10% of the outstanding shares, Standard & Poor's considers those shares to be unavailable and excludes those shares from the float-adjusted count used in the calculation of the market capitalization of the relevant company used in the S&P 500® Index.

For each index constituent, Standard & Poor's calculates an Investable Weight Factor (IWF) to reflect the available shares of the index constituent. The IWF is a fraction equal to the available shares of the index constituent divided by the total outstanding shares of the index constituent. For the purposes of calculating the IWF, the available shares are all outstanding shares of the relevant company other than those held by one of the three groups indicated above if those unavailable shares exceed 10% of the total outstanding shares. The float adjusted market capitalization of each company included in the index is equal to the IWF for that company multiplied by the share price of that company's stock multiplied by the number of shares outstanding. The value of the index is equal to the sum of the float-adjusted market capitalization for all companies included in the S&P 500® Index divided by the index divisor.

The index divisor is required to ensure that the value of the S&P 500® Index provides a continuous measure of market valuation despite additions and removals from the index, changes to shares outstanding, or capital actions. In the absence of any adjustment to the divisor, additions and deletions of companies included in the index would alter the value of the index as would share issuances and certain other corporate actions. Following these events, the divisor of the S&P 500® Index is adjusted to offset the change in the market value of the index due to those events. When a company is added to or deleted from the index, the net change in the market value of the index is calculated and this is used to calculate the new divisor. The market values of stocks being added or deleted are based on the prices, shares outstanding, IWFs and any other share count adjustments. There are a large range of different corporate actions ranging from routine share issuances or buy backs to unusual events like spin-offs or mergers that could affect the value of the index. These are listed on the table below with notes about the necessary changes and whether the divisor is adjusted.

| Corporate Action | Comments | Divisor Adjustment |
|------------------------------|---|--------------------|
| Company added/deleted | Net change in market value determines the divisor adjustment. | Yes |
| Change in shares outstanding | Any combination of secondary issuance, share repurchase or buy back share counts revised to reflect change. | Yes |

| Corporate Action | Comments | Divisor Adjustment |
|-------------------------|--|---------------------------|
| Stock split | Share count revised to reflect new count. Divisor adjustment is not required since the share count and price changes are offsetting. | No |
| Spin-off | If the spun-off company is not being added to the index, the divisor adjustment reflects the decline in index market value (i.e., the value of the spun-off unit). | Yes |
| Spin-off | Spun-off company added to the index, no company removed from the index. | No |
| Spin-off | Spun-off company added to the index, another company removed to keep number of names fixed. Divisor adjustment reflects deletion. | Yes |
| Change in IWF | Increasing (decreasing) the IWF increases (decreases) the total market value of the index. The divisor change reflects the change in market value caused by the change to an IWF. | Yes |
| Special Dividend | When a company pays a special dividend the share price is assumed to drop by the amount of the dividend; the divisor adjustment reflects this drop in index market value. | Yes |
| Rights offering | Each shareholder receives the right to buy a proportional number of additional shares at a set (often discounted) price. The calculation assumes that the offering is fully subscribed. Divisor adjustment reflects increase in market cap measured as the shares issued multiplied by the price paid. | Yes |

Changes to the S&P 500® Index in response to corporate actions and market developments are made on an as needed basis and can be made at any time. Changes in a company's shares outstanding due to its acquisition of another public company are made as soon as reasonably possible (other than de minimis merger and acquisition share changes). All other changes of less than 5% are accumulated and made quarterly on the third Friday of March, June, September, and December. Changes in a company's total shares outstanding of 5% or more due to public offerings, tender offers, Dutch auctions or exchange offers are made as soon as reasonably possible. Other changes of 5% or more (for example, due to company stock repurchases, private placements, an acquisition of a privately held company, redemptions, exercise of options, warrants, conversion of preferred stock, notes, debt, equity participations, at-the-market stock offerings or other recapitalizations) are made weekly, and are announced on Wednesdays for implementation after the close of trading the following Wednesday (one week later). Weekly share changes scheduled to be effective on the Wednesday of a rebalancing week are combined with the quarterly share rebalancing and implemented on Friday of that week. If a 5% or more share change causes a company's IWF to change by 5 percentage points or more (for example from 0.80 to 0.85), the IWF will be updated at the same time as the share change. IWF changes resulting from partial tender offers are considered on a case-by-case basis. In the case of in-the-money rights issues, share changes are made on the payable date regardless of the size of the share increase.
