Item 1.02 Termination of a Material Definitive Agreement.

On July 11, 2008, Immunomedics, Inc., a Delaware corporation (the Company), entered into a License and Collaboration Agreement (the Agreement), by and between the Company and Nycomed GmbH (Nycomed) whereby the Company provided Nycomed a worldwide license to develop, manufacture and commercialize veltuzumab, the Company's humanized anti-CD20 antibody, in the subcutaneous formulation, for the treatment of all non-cancer indications (the Product). The Company retained the rights to develop, manufacture and commercialize veltuzumab in the field of oncology.

Nycomed was acquired by Takeda Pharmaceutical Company in September, 2011. Last year, the Company notified Nycomed of its concern about delays in the Product's advancement. On May 14, 2013, the Company notified Nycomed that Nycomed was in material breach of the Agreement and that the Agreement would terminate if the breaches remained uncured. The Company initiated arbitration proceedings in September 2013 in an effort to resolve the dispute. On October 3, 2013, Takeda notified the Company that it considers the Agreement as terminated.

As a result of the Agreement's termination, all rights to the Product revert to the Company and the parties must cooperate to transition Product development back to the Company. In addition, Nycomed is required to assign and license certain contracts and other rights to the Company and to supply certain services to the Company for one year. The parties have begun discussions regarding the transition of the Product back to the Company. The Company will pursue the arbitration procedure to address its claim for damages due to delays in Product development and expects the arbitration to continue while the Product transition takes place.
