Item 7.01 Regulation FD Disclosure.

American Public University System (“APUS”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of American Public Education, Inc. (APEI) operating through American Military University and American Public University, today announced that the Higher Learning Commission (“HLC”) has reaffirmed its accreditation without any stipulations on its affiliation status. APUS has been accredited by HLC since 2006 and is a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools (www.ncahlc.org).

APUS was recently assessed under HLC’s Program to Evaluate and Advance Quality (PEAQ), a comprehensive evaluation process that includes an institutional self-study, an on-site evaluation by trained peer reviewers from other HLC-accredited institutions, and final decision-making by HLC bodies. APUS’s next comprehensive evaluation is scheduled for the 2020-21 academic year, and it has an interim progress report regarding development of University-wide coordination and improvement of graduate studies due in July 2015.

HLC is one of six regional agencies in the U.S. that evaluate and accredit institutions as a whole. Other agencies provide voluntary accreditation for specific programs. HLC accredits approximately 1,100 institutions of higher education in a 19-state region and is recognized by the U.S. Department of Education and the Council for Higher Education Accreditation (www.chea.org).

In addition to regional HLC accreditation, APUS is nationally accredited by the Distance Education and Training Council (DETC). APUS has also obtained programmatic accreditation for specific academic programs through applicable accrediting organizations. These specialized accreditations also require a significant amount of self-study and presentation of evidence to satisfy the requirements of each accrediting organization.
