As indicated in the Schedule 14A filed by Blockbuster Inc. (the Company) with the Securities and Exchange Commission on April 27, 2005 (the Schedule 14A), John F. Antioco, Chairman and CEO of the Company has stated that should he not be re-elected to the Company's Board of Directors (the Board), he would not plan to stay with the Company. In addition, as noted by the Company in the Schedule 14A, removal of Mr. Antioco from the position of Chairman of the Board would constitute Good Reason under Mr. Antioco's employment contract and could entitle him to receive the benefits provided in the contract including severance and accelerated vesting of equity awards.

Specifically, the contract provides that Mr. Antioco may terminate his employment for Good Reason by providing the Company with written notice thereof. The contract also provides that the Company would have ten business days from the date of such notice to cure the cause for Good Reason. With regard to the Company's ability to cure, the Board would need to make a fiduciary determination as to whether it would be appropriate, in light of the fact that the Company's stockholders failed to re-elect Mr. Antioco, to re-appoint him to the Board and to the position of Chairman, each of which is a requirement under the contract to cure the cause for Good Reason.

If Mr. Antioco's employment contract was triggered, he would be entitled to receive (i) his 2005 target bonus pro-rated from January 1, 2005 through the date of termination; (ii) a lump sum cash payment equal to the sum of his salary, deferred compensation level and target bonus for 2005, multiplied by the number of full and partial years remaining in his employment term; and (iii) continued medical benefits for the remainder of his employment term. In addition, any stock options held by Mr. Antioco would become immediately exercisable, and Mr. Antioco's restricted stock units would vest and become payable. The Company estimates that Mr. Antioco's payout in the event of a Good Reason termination immediately following the May 11th annual meeting of stockholders would be approximately $54 million, assuming a stock price of $9.98, which was the closing price of a share of the Company's class A common stock on April 27, 2005.

At the time Mr. Antioco entered into his employment contract with the Company in June 2004, he had 35 years of retail experience and had led three major retail turnarounds at Circle K, Taco Bell and at the Company. As a result, Mr. Antioco was considered for nearly every retail CEO job search and had many opportunities for compensation packages equal to or greater than the one offered, and accepted by him, at the Company. In order to best align Mr. Antioco's interests with those of the Company's stockholders, the compensation committee of the Board and their advisors designed Mr. Antioco's compensation package to achieve an equity payout based on an assumed compound annual growth rate of 12% in the Company's stock price over the contract's five-year term. In view of Mr. Antioco's forbearance of other potential opportunities available to him, his employment contract was also designed to provide for payment of a comparable sum in the event of a Good Reason termination.

In summary, Mr. Antioco has stated that he would like to stay at the Company as both Chairman and CEO and earn his compensation. He encourages stockholders to require that he do so for the benefit of all of the Company's stockholders by re-electing him to serve on the Board.
