NetEase to Extend Game Development and Beta Testing for Tianxia II

(Beijing April 30, 2007) NetEase.com, Inc. (NASDAQ: NTES), one of China's leading Internet and online game services providers, today reported that the Company plans to extend development and beta testing for its next generation online 3-Dimensional MMORPG (massively multiplayer online role-playing game) Tianxia II.

Based on results from the Phase II unlimited open beta testing of Tianxia II commenced on March 1, 2007, NetEase has determined that additional time for game development and design is needed to address feedback from gamers. Consequently, during this extended development phase, NetEase's Tianxia II research and development team will focus primarily on improving hardware functionality, enhancing group play and player advancement features, and reducing game complexity for beginners.

William Ding, Chief Executive Officer and Director of NetEase stated, "We will continue the unlimited open beta test until our extended research, re-design and re-development work is completed. Accordingly, the commercial launch of Tianxia II will be postponed until satisfactory results from our forthcoming round of open beta testing are achieved. We appreciate the feedback from the gamers who have taken part in the closed and open testing of Tianxia II. We believe our development and testing extension is an invaluable investment in the long-term marketability and player appeal of our new next generation game and will position it to follow in the footsteps of Fantasy Westward Journey and Westward Journey Online II to become a market leading MMORPG title."

Additional details on the extended game development and open beta testing for Tianxia II will be provided when the Company reports financial results for the first quarter of 2007.

This press release contains statements of a forward-looking nature. These statements are made under the "safe harbor" provisions of the U.S. Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. You can identify these forward-looking statements by terminology such as "will," "expects," "anticipates," "future," "intends," "plans," "believes," "estimates" and similar statements. The accuracy of these statements may be impacted by a number of business risks and uncertainties that could cause actual results to differ materially from those projected or anticipated, including risks related to: the risk that NetEase will not be able to adequately address feedback from gamers to enhance the appeal of Tianxia II; the risk that the online game market will not continue to grow or that NetEase will not be able to maintain its leading position in that market, which could occur if, for example, its new online games or expansion packs and other improvements to its existing games do not become as popular as management anticipates; the risk that changes in Chinese government regulation of the online game market may limit future growth of NetEase's revenue or cause revenue to decline; the risk that NetEase may not be able to continuously develop new and creative online services; the risk that NetEase will not be able to control its expenses in future periods; competition in NetEase's existing and potential markets; governmental uncertainties (including possible changes in the effective tax rates applicable to NetEase and its subsidiaries and affiliates), general competition and price pressures in the marketplace; the risk that security, reliability and confidentiality concerns may impede broad use of the Internet and e-commerce and other services; the risk that fluctuations in the value of the Renminbi with respect to other currencies could adversely affect NetEase's business and financial results; and other risks outlined in NetEase's filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission. NetEase does not undertake any obligation to update this forward-looking information, except as required under applicable law.
