Excerpt from Verizon Communications Inc. Third Quarter 2013 Earnings Conference Call

October 17, 2013

We announced an agreement with Vodafone to acquire its 45 percent interest in Verizon Wireless. The transaction will be accretive to earnings per share, provide additional operating cash flows, and enable greater flexibility to develop converged solutions without any integration and due diligence risks. The capital market environment was strong, and we had a fully executed bridge facility in place at the date of the announcement. We successfully arranged - in one day - the required permanent bond financing with a $49 billion debt offering. And earlier this month, we signed an agreement for up to $12 billion in term loans. Last week, we filed a Form S-4 registration statement and our proxy statement with the SEC related to the pending transaction. So, we've been busy and productive on the transaction front, but as always, our primary focus is driving strong operating results.

For the third quarter, we reported earnings of $0.78 per share on a GAAP basis. These results include a net gain on the sale of 700 B block spectrum of $0.02 per share, offset by net incremental interest expense of $0.01 per share related to the debt we have raised to finance the acquisition of the remaining 45 percent stake in Verizon Wireless.

In terms of the balance sheet, total debt increased to $99.1 billion due to the permanent financing we put in place related to the pending transaction to obtain full ownership of Verizon Wireless. However, since we do have the cash until the close of the transaction, our net debt to adjusted EBITDA remained quite low at about 1.1 times.

In terms of an update on our pending transaction to gain full ownership of Verizon Wireless: Our permanent financing is secured and we have taken out our bridge financing facility. An S-4 registration statement and our proxy statement were filed on October 8th and are under review by the SEC. You can access these filings on our Investor Relations website or the SEC website. Efforts are underway to obtain the required regulatory and shareholder approvals. We expect to close the transaction during the first quarter of 2014.

[With] the acquisition of Verizon Wireless, we now get to more of a converged middle with our consumer products between FiOS and Wireless and we no longer have the artificial wall up between the affiliate transactions or anything like that.

Brett Feldman - Deutsche Bank - Analyst

Thanks for taking the question. When you launched the Wireless deal, you had talked about an objective of getting back to your pre-deal leverage levels. I believe you said about four to five years but correct me if that is wrong. But regardless of the timeframe, I was hoping maybe you could just come back and talk about some of the foundational assumptions that support that goal.

For example, do you expect to see capital intensity continue to improve? I am curious what you are assuming about your ability to maintain or even grow your Wireless margins over that four- to five-year period? And then lastly, can you give us any color on what you have budgeted for spectrum purchases?

Fran Shammo - Verizon Communications, Inc. - EVP and CFO

Yes, thanks Brett. So look, I am not going to get in the details of what we have projected. If you think about everything that we had to consider here, we considered tax, we considered CapEx, we considered the incremental tax rate. As I said, our tax rate will increase to a 35% to 36% range from what we have always guided from a 31% to 33% range. And that is because of the VZW coming over. We had to project out what our interest rate was. We know what that is now based on the offering that we did.

As far as CapEx goes, I have been pretty consistent here. You should consider us improving our CapEx to revenue ratio going forward. You should look at us as to what we have invested this year and we are going to do what we need to do to continue to invest in our networks and our platforms.

But moving out of this, there were three priorities that we set up to come to that four to five years. One was we will continue to invest in our networks and platforms. That is top priority for us. The next is we will continue to invest and buy licenses either opportunistically or in the auctions. I can't tell you what that number is because obviously it is going to be a public auction and we have a lot of strategies around how we acquire licenses. But that was built into our model.

And then finally, the dividend policy is also a very critical piece of this component to our equity shareholders and I think our Board showed that when they increased the dividend at the same time that they announced the deal. They are very confident in our cash flow.

And then finally, we have a commitment that we will delever the balance sheet as quickly as possible.

So look, I think if you look at the performance, if you look at our cash flow and our free cash flow this quarter, I think we are demonstrating that four to five years is within our horizon and we will meet our targets.
