Former U.S. Rep. Waxman: The Sprint-T-Mobile Merger Will Benefit Californians

As a member of Congress, I always studied proposed mergers with a critical eye. In my 40 years as a U.S. Representative, including my time as chairman of the Energy & Commerce Committee, I worked to protect California consumers. This led me to oppose concentrations of power, especially if such actions would lead to less competition, higher prices, or lower-quality products. But after working with and for T-Mobile and after studying the merits of this transaction, I can say with confidence that the Sprint-T-Mobile merger will benefit Californians.

The T-Mobile-Sprint Merger Will Help Close The Technological Divide Currently Present In California:
Former President Clinton Advisor

Our state is long overdue to upend the telecommunications status quo. We are only as strong as our most vulnerable communities, and there are currently far too many Californians on the wrong side of the technological divide. We need to bridge that gap fast, as it is key to the economic growth of our state and the well-being of our residents. A stronger competitor in the wireless marketplace, with the ability to speed up 5G investment, will help make that happen.

Former Massachusetts and Washington Attorneys General Support T-Mobile-Sprint Merger

In today's dynamic market for broadband internet where the advent of 5G technology promises to transform and expand consumer options scale is critical to competition. The proposed merger of T-Mobile and Sprint is a case in point. The reason why we support this merger and, in fact, why we joined the T-Mobile advisory team is that it will create substantial consumer benefits by giving the combined company the spectrum, assets and scale to more effectively challenge larger players.

Talk More Wireless CEO: New T-Mobile Will Bring Affordable 5G to Americans Everywhere

With plans to invest nearly $40 billion within the first three years of the merger and bring a nationwide 5G network sooner than otherwise possible, the New T-Mobile will push AT&T and Verizon to do the same. As the New T-Mobile develops a nationwide 5G footprint on a faster timetable, dealers like Talk More Wireless will be there to help rural and cost-conscious Americans reap the benefits. T-Mobile's record of bringing mobile broadband to underserved Americans speaks for itself, and I can't wait to see the great things that T-Mobile and Sprint can do together.

Consumers Research Executive Director: Consumers Win with T-Mobile-Sprint Merger

Together, however, T-Mobile and Sprint would have the requisite size, money, and spectrum licenses to compete with Verizon and AT&T in pushing forward the industry's technological capabilities. By allowing the two carriers to join forces, the FCC and the DOJ would empower a third, robust competitor to vie with telecommunication's front-runners. In that race, cellular customers win.

Former FCC Associate General Counsel: T-Mobile-Sprint Merger Means More Robust Competition

The proposed T-Mobile/Sprint merger's enablement of a rapidly deployed nationwide 5G network would significantly benefit consumers and enterprises.

Maine Public Advocate Says the T-Mobile-Sprint Merger Will Stimulate Maine's Economy

The new T-Mobile will bring us the first nationwide 5G network, modernize our economy, expand rural access, and provide affordable broadband options to Mainers. As Maine's public advocate, I support this merger so the new T-Mobile can bring us into the 5G future and benefit consumers in Maine and across the country.

Draper Area Chamber of Commerce President Believes New T-Mobile Will Benefit Every American

Rarely do we have the opportunity to voice our support for something that would impact virtually every American. The merger between T-Mobile and Sprint provides us with this opportunity. This merger will bring faster internet speeds and increase access to people and communities across the country.

LGBTQ Nonprofit Director: New T-Mobile's 5G Network Will Pioneer Improved Access to Telehealth Services

Everyone should be able to choose their doctor, and this is especially consequential for LGBTQ Americans in rural communities. Expanded choice doesn't end there—the New T-Mobile's 5G network will force AT&T and Verizon to respond, which means even more investment in rural 5G infrastructure, more access to telehealth, and lower prices for customers.

Chris Wood, Executive Director, LGBT Technology Partnership (9/17/18)

Former Florida Public Service Commissioner: Florida Businesses to Gain from T-Mobile-Sprint Merger

Indeed, the next-gen mobile network resulting from the merger can be harnessed to create additional business opportunities in the Sunshine State. Wireless technology is an essential tool for all businesses and through the power, speed and reliability of 5G networks, our businesses can flourish. 5G networks not only mean more robust economic development, but stronger and broader educational options, enhanced public safety, and greater access to health care for our communities.

National Diversity Coalition Collaborates with New T-Mobile on Diversity, Community Investment and Low-Income Wireless Initiatives

The MOU demonstrates T-Mobile's commitment to best practices in corporate social responsibility and earns them the opportunity to prove that their proposed merger with Sprint would bring value and benefit to consumers throughout California. NDC looks forward to a great partnership with T-Mobile that will set a new standard in collaboration between community-based organizations and corporate America.
