On September 21, 2004 Southwestern Energy Company announced that it is increasing its 2004 capital budget to $284.7 million, up from $254.0 million announced in July of this year. The increase brings the total planned expenditures for the company's exploration and production segment to $275.2 million for 2004, up from $244.5 million. Approximately $17.9 million of the increase in capital is allocated to the Overton Field in East Texas, which includes increasing the number of wells to be drilled in the field in 2004 from 74 wells to 84 wells. Approximately $8.7 of the increase in capital will be directed toward additional drilling and leasehold acquisition in the company's Fayetteville Shale play in Arkansas.
