ECHOSTAR OFFERS STATEMENT CONCERNING REV. AL SHARPTON AND NATIONAL ACTION NETWORK

With limited available spectrum, EchoStar Communications Corporation and its DISH Network carries 21 public interest channels, more than any other pay TV provider. EchoStar is extremely proud of the many quality programs targeted to minority communities presented in its public interest channel lineup. Among them is CoLoursTV, a non-profit, African American owned and operated network whose board includes the Urban League, NAACP, and Black United Fund, among others.

EchoStar's DISH Network is committed to public interest programming. In December 2001, after careful review of over a dozen applicants, DISH Network selected CoLoursTV and StarNet to join EchoStar's total lineup of 21 public interest channels that offer a broad range of educational and informational programming. These channels are provided to DISH Network customers free of charge, and EchoStar's selection process complies with the law.

Because the number of qualified applicants exceeded the number of public interest channels available for 2001, EchoStar was unable to offer carriage to other public interest channel applicants, including the Rev. Sharpton's Word Network.

Contrary to statements in a NAN release on Jan. 31, 2002, EchoStar provided access and copies of its public inspection files as requested by Sharpton's Word Network representatives when they visited the company's Littleton, Colo., office this week.

EchoStar executives have met with Word Network representatives several times. Charlie Ergen, CEO and chairman of EchoStar, has also offered to meet recently with Sharpton and his Word Network associates on two occasions in Washington, D.C., but Ergen's efforts were rebuffed.

Therefore, it is extremely difficult for EchoStar to understand the Word Network's and Rev. Sharpton's continued calls for protests.

Today, EchoStar and DIRECTV duplicate seven public interest channels. The request for carriage by Word Network and other public interest programmers underscores the need for the pending merger which would increase capacity for other deserving applicants and add over 6 million viewers to the Word Network, which is currently carried by DIRECTV.
